MANAGER COMMENTARY

The FED continued to raise rates in September. At the same time US 10 year Treasury bond yield rose over 3% level, which had become a resistance level. Canada and USA reached a trade agreement end of September, next one should be with China. Markets have started to interpret that president Trump's ultimate goal is to limit the influence of China and not only the shrinking of the trade deficit.

Our most profitable holdings in September were investments to European oil and oil service companies and Russian equities. Also, the value of our investments in corporate bond and global high yield funds rose. On the other hand, the returns from investments to American small cap companies as well as Facebook and Alibaba were negative.

The rapid increase of long USD -rates, more serious trade war with China and the proposal of large budget deficit in Italy have made the markets nervous. It might take several months until these worries disappear. The most important driver in the markets is now politics. Long lasting uncertainty may have a negative impact on global growth.
